Austatud rahvakunstisõbrad!

Rahvaid ühtlustava massikultuuri kõrval võib praegu tähdada ka teistsugust suunda - rahvaste ja etniliste rühmade püüdu jäeda iseendaks. Omakultuuri ja rahvuse säilimine on Eestimaalgi aktuaalne. Kriitilistel aegadel on rahvad pöördunud oma traditsioonilise kultuuri poole. Selle protsessi üks nähtusi on viimase paarikümne aasta jooksul korraldatavad rohked folklorefestivalid paljudes maades. Ka BALTICA '92 juhtmõte on pöörata pilk iseendasse, oma kodu ja kodupaiga poole. Võib-olla leiate ühinevas ja ühtlustuvas Euroopas rahvana edasikemiseks tuge emakeelsest laulust, tantsust ja muusikast. Aidaku ka käesolev festival meil säilitada iseennast ning lugupidavalt suhtuda teistesse, kes sedasama püüavad teha.

Dear folk tradition admirers!

Apart from the levelling mass culture, one can observe today the opposite tendency among nations and ethnic groups to maintain their own identity. The preservation of our own nation and culture is topical also in Estonia. This process is featured by numerous folklore festivals arranged all over the world during the last couple of decades. And consequently the leading ideas of BALTICA '92 are identity, home and home region. Maybe vernacular songs, dances and music give support to our existence as a nation in the midst of the uniting and levelling aspirations of modern Europe. Let this festival be yet another impulse to maintain our identity and respect others who do the same.

ESTONIA — OUR HOME

About 5000 years ago on the territory of the present day Estonia arrived in quantities the settlers, whom the archaeological, anthropological and linguistic data let us identify as the Finno-Ugrians. On the eastern shores of the Baltic Sea has ever since been spoken the language, which later on evolved into the Saami (Lapp) and Balto-Finnic languages: Estonian, Finnish, Vepsic, Karelian, Votic, Izhoric and Livonian.

The primal home of the Finno-Ugrians was situated somewhere at the foot of the Ural Mountains. In prehistoric times the Finno-Ugric kindred peoples settled vast areas between the Ural Mountains and the Baltic Sea. Besides the Baltic Finns, among the Finno-Ugrians are included the Ugrians (Ostyaks, Voguls, Hungarians), the Permian people (Permian and Zyrian Komis, Votyaks), the Volga Finns (Maris, Mordvins) and some other peoples who have become extinct for today.

When new settlers appeared in their neighbourhood and among them, the Finno-Ugrians fell under the influence of various languages and cultures, while mutual ties between the kindred peoples loosened up. The Baltic Finns maintained contact for the longest with the Volga Finns, and this phenomenon is most vividly expressed in the Setu culture.

The Estonian culture on the whole developed in closer contact with the new neighbours: the Balts (ancestors of the Latvians and Lithuanians), the Scandinavians, and later on the Germanic people. But nevertheless, the Estonians managed to preserve their language, which has formed the significant basis for our identity. Also various archaic elements of culture persisted, and in symbiosis with the newer impact shaped the image of the Estonian culture. Undoubtedly the most unique Estonian (and Balto-Finnic) culture phenomenon is the archaic folk song (regilaul) in Kalevala metre. The linguistic and poetic structure of the latter was presumably evolved a couple of thousand years ago.

Among other things the Estonians have brought along from their onetime primal home the word kodu (home), the original form being koda (conical tent). The contents of this word has always remained sacred for us. Our ancestors have for at least 5 thousand years permanently settled the eastern shores of the Baltic Sea, where the auspicious strategic and benign natural position has provided good as well as ill fortune for us.

The Estonians lost their independence starting from the 13th century. The Danes invaded the regions of present day Tallinn, the majority of the Estonian territory was conquered by the Order of the Brethren of the Sword. In the course of time the Germanic lords of manor took possession of the whole land and enslaved the native people.

The land of Estonia has been swept over by numerous wars: the Livonian War in the 16th century, Polish-Swedish War and Russian-Swedish War in the 17th century, the Nordic War at the beginning of the 18th century. Acts of warfare, marauding soldiers, pest epidemics and hunger made havoc everywhere, so that the majority of population perished. These horrors are reflected in folk legends, telling about how the whole regions became desolated and then the only survivors — a man and a woman — found each other by footmarks. And they conceived new life. Another pest legend tells about two women, who sat by the ready dug grave and waited for death while knitting socks and mittens, so that those whom death spared might keep their hands and feet warm to carry on life...

While the so called Swedish period in the 17th century brought along some relief for the Estonian peasantry and favoured the spread of learning, the following annexation to Russia in 1721 involved decrease in education system as well as intensified serfdom (jurisdiction of the landowner over the peasant) and national oppression.

The beginning of the 19th century saw peasant revolts against serfdom, the young national intelligentsia started pursuing vernacular education system and other national rights. A number of national societies were founded, periodicals in the Estonian language started circulating. The national epic "Kalevipoeg" was published, Jakob Hurt initiated vast movement for collecting folklore, the foundation of the Estonian professional culture was laid. The national awakening movement was launched among the Estonians. The abolition of serfdom was followed by acquisition of landed property by the peasants.

In the 1880ies upon the Baltics was forced the uncompromising Russification policy. To use the Estonian language was forbidden even in village schools, the only official language became Russian. However, the national consciousness could not be suppressed any more.

Yet political independence was achieved only in 1917 after the Russian revolution. The Independent Republic of Estonia was proclaimed in Tallinn on February 24, 1918. The Estonians had to defend their state with the use of arms both against the Russian as well as Landeswehr forces. The War of Independence against Russia was ended by the Tartu peace treaty on February 2, 1920, in which Russia assured eternally to relinquish the claim for sovereignty over Estonia.

Before World War II the standard of living in Estonia could well be compared with that of Finland, for example. Higher education system in the Estonian language was formed, the national high culture thrived in literature, music composition, fine arts. In order to collect and preserve traditional culture, in Tartu were founded the Estonian National Museum and the Estonian Folklore Archive. Estonia was a member state of the League of Nations, she had close contacts with other European states, especially with the Nordic countries.

The future destiny of Estonia was determined in 1939 by the secret deal contracted between Hitler and Stalin, the notorious Molotov—Ribbentrop pact, which resulted in the Soviet invasion of Estonia and annexation to the Soviet Union in 1941. This was in turn followed by the German occupation. Both of them were accompanied by political repressions, deportations, coercive mobilization. Due to fierce acts of warfare, repressions and deportations of Estonians before and after the war as well as with refugees this nation lost every fourth or fifth inhabitant. These losses were “replaced”, in accordance with the Soviet deliberate resettling policy, by hundreds of thousands of colonists. Which in turn resulted in the increase of the Russian-speaking population in Estonia up to 43%, whereas in the towns of North-East Estonia they already form the majority. Let's remind, that before WW II the percentage of other nations among the Estonians was 8%. This situation, where the Estonians have been gradually forced to become a minority in our original homeland has created general social stress and national distress, which have not disappeared even today.

During the period of glasnost policy by Gorbatchov in Estonia (and in the Baltic) sparkled up the unique movement, the so called singing revolution. To our regret, the administrative body of the Soviet Union had no want to accept the independence pursuits of the Baltic nations. The efforts by the Estonians to restore independence became successful during the days of the August coup in 1991.

At present the state of Estonia has to face enormous complications in order to overcome the result of the center-orientated economic integration during the last fifty years, and in order to get rid of the most perilous remnants of the occupation regime: the Russian armed forces and military bases.

Yet our national and cultural identity have to face new hazards created by the process of integration into the European economy and culture. Once again as vital issues crop up the values of national culture, national consciousness, respect towards oneself and towards the others, retrieving and maintaining psychological balance. Once more gains importance the ancient principle of our traditional ethics: the imitation of cosmic harmony on Earth. Let the present folk culture festival BALTICA '92 subserve these purposes.

FOLKLORE MOVEMENT IN ESTONIA AND INTERNATIONAL CONNECTIONS

Estonia got in touch with the international folklore festivals in 1985 when in Tallinn was arranged the 16th General Assembly of CIOFF (Conseil International des Organisations de Festivals de Folklore et d'Arts Traditionnelles, UNESCO Status B). This assembly initiated direct contacts with a number of countries as well as launched the idea of organizing BALTICA festivals in the Baltic countries. On top of that it also provided the official perception about the importance of folklore in national culture.

In this connection it became necessary to confirm the contents and organizational body of folklore movement. Thus on November 16, 1988 was founded the FOLKLORE SOCIETY OF ESTONIA, first of its kind in the Baltic. At the same time took shape the consultive council which embodied the initiators of folklore movement and festival organizers from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. This council founded on April 4, 1989 the Folklore Association "Baltica" which joins the three Baltic countries. The Association aimed at coordinating organized folklore movement, exchanging of information and international recognition by CIOFF. As president of the Association was elected Mrs. Ingrid Rüütel who has represented the Baltic countries at the CIOFF World Congress.

In 1990 "Baltica" was admitted the status of associate member by CIOFF. At the 22nd CIOFF World Congress in Israel in November 1991 Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, now member states of the United Nations, were incorporated in the world organization as full members with the rights of national sections.

Beside new potentialities, international cooperation on state level has brought along serious obligations in advancing one's national culture and taking part in worldwide projects. On March 9, 1992 was founded the CIOFF National Section of Estonia (CIOFF—Estonia) which embodies the interested societies, associations and representatives of local folklore festivals. We proceed from the recommendations to safeguard traditional culture and folklore adopted by the 25th Session of the UNESCO World Conference in Paris on November 15, 1988. This document recognizes folklore as the main transmitter of national identity and draws guidelines for preserving and advancing national culture as well as for organizing international cooperation.

The previous years have also witnessed the advancing international relations on the level of organizations and societies. During the summer of 1989 was signed the cooperation agreement between the Folk Music Association of Finland and the Folklore Society of Estonia. A year later this agreement was subscribed by the Folk Dance and Folk Music Society of Estonia as well as the Folk Culture Centre of Estonia.

In 1989 the Folklore Society of Estonia became the member of IOV (International Organizationa of Folk Art in Austria, UNESCO Status B). In December 1990 was signed the cooperation agreement between the Folklore Association "Baltica" and the Nordic folk dance organization NORDLEK.

International connections have proved to become the impulse and stimulus to folklore movement. The Estonian folk culture has always been influenced by various cultures, but has still maintained its national characteristics. Safeguarding and preserving of national identity provides Estonia with a specific status on the culture map of the world.
